POWERS DO NOT AGREE

GLOOMY OUTLOOK AT CONFERENCE.

FRANCE FIRM.

HOPE OF FIVE-POWER AGREEMENT LOW

London, Yesterday.
It is understood in American naval delegation circles that hope of reaching an agreement on a Five Power basis has been virtually abandoned. The delegation has booked passages to America for April 22. It is thought that the outcome of the Conference will be on effective Three Power agreement between Britain, Japan and America, and an agreement on minor points between the five Powers.—Reuter.

Italy's Claims.
It is learned from the Italian delegation source that Signor Grandi in recent conversations emphasized that the chief questions at the Conference are naval disarmament and not political. Signor Grandi has now been eleven weeks absent from Rome, where an accumulation of work is awaiting him, but the Italians have no intention of precipitating matters and have made no travelling arrangements. The question in regard to the French and Italian side of the conference elicited the reply, "It is no longer a question of Italy's claim to parity, but France's claim to superiority."

Sensational Stories.
The recent optimism regarding the Naval Conference was distinctly diminished to-day. It is stated that the prospects of a Five Power Pact are very far from bright. The only hopeful sign at present is that M. Briand, Mr. Henderson and Mr. MacDonald are lunching together to-day for the purpose of discussing the French formula.
The British official spokesman pointed out that this fact disposed of Paris reports that Great Britain had rejected the formula. He declared that sensational stories in the Press in regard to Signor Grandi's statement to Mr. Henderson were greatly exaggerated.

Search For Formula.
Rugby, Yesterday.
The delegates to the Naval Conference and their expert advisers again spent several hours to-day in search for a formula setting out the agreed interpretation of certain articles of the League Covenant. Although their efforts have not yet been successful, the task has not been abandoned and hopes are still entertained that a formula may be found which will so increase France's sense of security as to enable her to make an appreciable reduction in her naval tonnage requirements without explicitly or implicitly extending the obligations to which Great Britain is committed under the League Covenant and the Locarno Treaty.

The Prime Minister Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and the Foreign Secretary Mr. Henderson, accompanied by Sir Robert Vansittart and others, met the French Foreign Minister, M. Briand, at luncheon and had a discussion on the subject, which lasted till after four o'clock. The discussion will be resumed at St. James's Palace to-morrow morning.
Meanwhile the principal naval experts of the United States, Britain, and Japan spent great part of the day examining the reservations attached to the Japanese Government's reply to the compromise tonnage proposals addressed to Tokyo. Good progress was made.
The submarine experts met this afternoon on the subject of the proposals for the humanizing of submarine warfare and limiting the size of the submarine. It is expected that the report of these experts will be forthcoming in the course of the next few days.—British Wireless Service.

Paris, Yesterday.
The newspapers assert that Mr. MacDonald had selected the French formula.

TO-DAY'S RACING.

Mr. "Johnny" Heard Unable to Ride.

SOME GREAT SPORT.

[By "Wombat"]
Some great racing is promised at the meeting at Happy Valley this afternoon, and good entries have been received in all the ten events.

Although there were a few mild showers during the early morning I do not expect the going will have suffered to any great extent, and if we do not have anything in the way of a heavy shower before the opening event times should be on the fast side, as the track is in excellent condition at the moment.

Nationalist II's Chance.
President Hall, who is the big chance for the Aggregate Stakes, the principal race of the meeting, will have his work cut out to win this important race if Nationalist II is started here as this latter pony has a wonderful record in Shanghai.

Other ponies to be watched in this race will be African Eve and Royal Flush. The latter was very unfortunate to lose at the last meeting when his rider broke a stirrup iron.

Mr. "Johnny" Heard will not be riding to-day as he is in Hospital with eye trouble.

JUMPED INTO HARBOUR

Whilst Lance-Sergeant Nolan was on duty near the Douglas Wharf, yesterday afternoon, he heard Police whistles being blown and he went to investigate. He learned from two Chinese detectives that a Chinese, about 20 years of age, had jumped into the harbour.
The man, who was not seen again, was a returned banished.

EMPIRE CANNING INDUSTRY

COUNCIL TO BE SET UP TO ASSIST CROWN COLONIES

London, Yesterday.

Plans are afoot to form an Empire Canning Council to stimulate the creation of local canning factories, particularly in India and the Crown Colonies. The Council consists of unofficial representatives of India and all the Crown Colonies, but it is understood that the Governments are co-operating informally.

The object of the Council is to assist the canning industry by advice and technical help, firstly, by a survey of the situation to ascertain the nature of the help required.

It is anticipated that there will be a large field in the Far East, where canned foods, mostly from America, are suited to the European population. One of the proposals of the Council is to apply canning machinery to the foods of other peoples, for instance, to tap thereby the large market of Chinese distributed over the Pacific. A questionnaire has already been sent out throughout the world.

The further operations of the council will be guided by the answer to the questionnaire.—Reuter.

TELEPHOTOGRAPHY MARVELS

HOPE THAT LONDON TIMES MAY BE 'FLASHED' TO NEW YORK

INVENTOR'S AIM.

Schenectady, Yesterday.
Simultaneous, world-wide publication of newspapers by means of wireless telephotography is suggested by the appearance here of the front page of the San Francisco Call, transmitted across the Continent within three hours of leaving the press by a recording machine invented by Charles Young, son of the famous author of the reparations plan. Charles, in a recent address, expressed the hope that he would see pages of the London Times flashed to New York "with a snap."—Reuter's American Service.

NEW SOLUTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT

SALE OF BRITISH GOODS ON INSTALMENT PLAN

BRITISH CREDIT

Rugby, Yesterday.

In the course of a debate on unemployment in the House of Commons, Sir Arthur Steel Maitland, Minister of Labour in the late Conservative Government, suggested as a reserve measure that the selling of British goods on the instalment system might be developed in non-European countries. He pointed out that where the instalment system was developed there was an enormous extension of sales, and in some European markets the system

UGLY SCENES IN BOMBAY

RAILWAY STATION RUSHED BY INFURIATED MOB

EUROPEANS INJURED

Thirty persons were injured when the police were forced to fire on a crowd of disorderly railway strikers outside the Victoria terminus of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The injured include a European police sergeant and a European man and woman.

Two thousand strikers forced an entrance to the station and demanded to be taken by the Culla Railway. The officials refused, upon which the incensed mob noisily demonstrated, tearing down posters and harassing the passengers and passers-by. The police were summoned and the mob pelted them with stones. Finally the police were forced to fire upon which the mob retreated. Police are still guarding the station.—Reuter.

A RHYME OF THE DAY.

My Friend The Printer.

The Printer is a modest man
Who's always true to type;
He dwells upon the second floor
Amidst the printing press' roar,
And sets up all my trips.

I rarely see his cheery smile,
He holds himself aloof,
But every day at ten to three,
To show he's not forgotten me
He sends me down a proof.

He doesn't care if I'm inspired
By sonnets or by lyrics;
He's ready, like the best of chaps,
TO SET MY VERSES UP IN CAPS.

Or print them in hysterics.
He'll space my stanzas out to make Them fill the hole they do,
And if he finds I have not writ
Enough to make my copy fit,
With wonderful command of wit,
He'll add a line or two!

But often he can show a heart
As cold as ice in winter,
For when I feel inclined to bleat
Too long in spite of rhyme and feet
He'll cut me, that's to say, delete
My (No more space!—The Printer)

FISH LEARN ALPHABET.

Fish can be taught to read, as demonstrated before a gathering of scientists and students at Berlin University.

The experiment was made with twenty-two species of fish, all of them proved apt pupils. First, the fish had shown they were not colour blind and could distinguish which was their favourite food by its colour when attracted to a string of beads.

CIVIL WAR.

Advance of Kuominchun Blocked.

THREAT TO NANYANG

To block the advance of the Kuominchun, the 5th Route Army are guarding the southern section of the Ping-Han line at three points: the first, Yencheng, controlled by Generals Fan Chung-sou and Chi Meng-ling; the second, Chumai, by General Shang Kuan Wan Hsiang; and the 3rd, Sinyang, by Generals Chiang Ting-wen and Chao Kuan-tao.

General Ho Ching-chun wires that the Kuominchun, who at first intended to penetrate the Hsiang-Fan area, have been withdrawn and are likely to direct their main body of troops to attack Nanyang, an important strategic district in the South West of Honan. If that is true, adds General Ho, the Kuominchun will be surely crushed, because there are 250,000 national forces defending the Ping-Han line and the North of Hupei.

To Resist Attack.

The two divisions under Han Fu-kui have arrived at Taining, massing on the Shantung border to await instructions. Han proceeded on April 2 from Hinchow to Tsaochow and surroundings for inspection.

General Chen Tiao-yuan wired to Nanking on April 2, requesting the appointment of Han Fu-kui as C.I.C. of the Tsin-pu line to lead his army to resist the Shanai forces who are coming southward.

The bridge on the east of Mamutchi, on the Lung-Hai line, was destroyed on April 1, the railway traffic being partially opened to Yang Tsao. Telegraphic communication between Kauchow and Kweichow was interrupted on April 1.

Kuominchun Cavalry.

After attending the conference, Shih Yu-san and Wen Tsun-tsoi at Chengchow, Lu Chung-lin has returned to Loyang, but will return to Chengchow again as soon as Feng Yu-hsiang arrives there. The cavalry of the Kuominchun are now stationed at the suburb of Chengchow. The troops of Wan Tsun-tsoi are advancing toward Lanfeng.

General Ho Ying-ching will proceed to Hankow after receiving instructions from the President.

Yen Hsi-shan.

Yen Hsi-shan is now bent upon organising a new Government at Peking, but has not yet decided whether to adopt the Committee or Presidential system. According to the secretary of Chen Kung-po, Yen Hsi-shan desires to abolish the Party administration, hence the object of the trip of Chen Kung-po and Wang Fa-chin to proceed to Loyang is to consult Feng Yu-hsiang regarding the reorganisation of the Party affairs.—Canton News Agency.

Earlier News

Nanking, Yesterday.
The open breach between the Shansi-Kuominchun allies and the National Government has taken definite form, hostilities having taken place near Tsinanfu for the past two days. The Shansi-Kuominchun allies have been assailing the Nationalist forces at Yuchang, which is but forty miles from Tsinanfu.

Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, Assistant in Command of the anti-Nanking allies, is expected to arrive at Chengchow sometime to-morrow, personally to direct the advancing Shansi-Kuominchun forces. It is interesting to note that Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang's Kuominchun present forces were the first troops to capture Tsinanfu in 1926, when they were fighting under Marshal Chiang Kai-shek.

Nanking and Shanghai are both quiet at the moment, although the National Government has commandeered practically all the Chinese steamers plying between the Yangtze ports. Trade on the Yangtze has been brought almost to a standstill, and merchants are adopting a waiting attitude before ordering goods from Shanghai.

MISSIONARY'S SAD FATE.

DESCRIPTION OF MURDER OF MR. SCARLETT

SHOT NEAR HEART.

POLICE UNABLE TO TRACE THE BANDITS

Tientsin, Yesterday.

Mr. A. P. Cullen arrived this afternoon with Mr. Scarlett's body. Interviewed, he detailed the outrage as follows: The missionaries arrived at Peitaiho Junction about five o'clock on Wednesday evening and were proceeding to the beach on donkeys when, at about 5.30, in broad daylight, roughly eight men from the junction, who were confronted by three Chinese in civilian clothes, who suddenly produced pistols and covered the foreigners. The leader held up Mr. Cullen, who was riding ahead, while the remaining two attended to Mr. Scarlett.

The bandits demanded the foreigners to hand over money and valuables and while Mr. Cullen was complying, he heard a shot behind and looking back saw Mr. Scarlett fall from his donkey. The murderers then rushed up, urging the leader to be quick, and after searching the foreigners' suitcases, the three hastily decamped.

Mr. Cullen rushed to where Mr. Scarlett was lying and found life almost extinct, with a bullet two inches above the heart. Mr. Scarlett died in five minutes.

Later assistance was hastily summoned from the nearest village, a litter procured and the body taken to Peitaiho. The police and military have promised every assistance, but do not appear to be hopeful of finding the miscreants.

Mr. Cullen expresses the opinion that the bandits were inexperienced and shot possibly by accident, as the miscreants appeared to be considerably flustered during the whole proceeding. Later the donkey boys were interrogated by the police and confessed to seeing the bandits loitering at the junction, when the foreigners arrived, and believed that they detoured after the missionaries on the road. The affair has created intense interest in Tientsin, where Mr. Scarlett is a respected member of a missionary body, and widespread sympathy is felt for the bereaved wife and children.—Reuter.

A KOREAN GIRL'S STRANGE STORY

CLAIMS SHE WAS KIDNAPPED BY FOREIGNERS

SERVANT STILL MISSING.

A strange story, says the Shanghai Times, of an alleged kidnapping of a Korean girl, stated to be the owner of a cafe, and her female servant, was being investigated by the Japanese Consular police and the police of the International Settlement. The girl claims she was kidnapped early on the night of February 27, by two foreigners as she was walking with her servant on Yalu Road.

After being missing for approximately two weeks, during which the Japanese and local police conducted a search, the girl, who is 20 years old, returned to the restaurant, which is on Yalu Road, and told the story of the alleged kidnapping. She appeared to be suffering from a shock.

From Japanese sources it was learned that the girl told employees of the restaurant that after being forced into a motor car by the foreigners, she and the servant were taken to an isolated foreign dwelling, after several hours of driving through the streets. They were placed in separate rooms, she said, and given poor Chinese food and little water.

On March 6, according to the story, the servant was taken from the house. The girl asserts that she made her escape through a ruse, but that when she emerged from the house she did not have her bearings.

She further says that she met a foreign woman who sympathized with her and took her to the restaurant on Yalu Road. The police of the Japanese Consulate expressed the belief that the two had been abducted and that the abductors were planning to sell them.

Police are keeping a watch on outgoing vessels. Relatives of the servant are alarmed and fear that the woman may have met with foul play.

3 GOOD REASONS.

Father Cancels World Cruise.

Mr. Noah Puckett came to Shanghai as a member of the crew of the world-touring liner, President Fillmore, of the Dollar Steamship Company. The President Fillmore has sailed for the south on the continuation of her trip around this mundane sphere.

Mr. Puckett was not aboard when the vessel sailed. He had three good reasons for not continuing the journey. Mr. Puckett is sailing for the United States on the next vessel of the Dollar Line. He is sailing as a guest of the company, which tends to prove that even big concerns with worldwide connections do not overlook the welfare of their employees. Here's the story:

A few hours before the vessel sailed a message flashed through the ether to the Fillmore, addressed to Mr. Puckett. It read:

"A son. Congratulations."

Mr. Puckett was proud and happy. The commander of the vessel heard the news and personally congratulated him.

Came another message for the elated Mr. Puckett, as follows: "Another son. More congratulations."

Mr. Puckett was astounded, but his happiness knew no bounds. Just think of it! Noah Puckett the father of twins! It was wonderful news and Mr. Puckett paced the deck with his head high in the atmosphere. Came the third message, and with it news of a third son. Triplets!

Mr. Puckett nearly collapsed, but recovered and whooped himself hoarse. Other members of the crew whooped. One or two officers whooped. Everybody whooped. The Captain heard the great news. He communicated with officials of the Company. It was too much for the officials. They decided that no man who has just become the father of triplets should go on a voyage around the world. Mr. Puckett will be paid in full for the world girdling trip. He will receive a nice bonus, and will be sent home. —Shanghai Times.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE!

STORMY ROMANCE OF A BANK CLERK

A FATHER'S OBJECTION.

Whether love shall triumph, or parental affection and discipline shall prevail, may depend on the influence of the decision to be rendered by Magistrate I. T. Morris in the British Police Court, Shanghai, in the case in which a youthful Portuguese named Carlos M. Marques, a British subject and employee of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, is charged with assault by Mr. "A," a European, as the aftermath of a love affair between the complainant's daughter aged "sixteen years and a week" and the accused.

Humour, fury and pathos characterized the proceedings which has commenced. The father of the girl was furiously indignant, and her mother was sobbing for the major part, while the accused, who betrayed no emotions, appeared to be hardly concerned.

The action, however, being a criminal one, the defendant stood in the dock.

Waxing furiously indignant, Mr. "A," the complainant, who was born in Shanghai 45 years ago, and has been brought up there, stated to the Court that he had three daughters and one son. He professed to have seen the accused but thrice, in all his life.

The "Vanishing" Man.

"I first met him," he stated, "roughly six months ago at the Hazewood cafe in North Szechuen road one noon while I was passing that way. I did not see him well enough then, but I recognise him now. I knew my daughter was inside and I went in to see who she was with. When I saw this man, I asked her, 'Who is this you are in company with?' While I was asking her this question, the man disappeared entirely—he vanished."

Mr. Wing: Was it with your sanction that your daughter was in company with this individual?—Most decidedly not; that is why I went in to see who she was with.

Q: What was the situation about your daughter?—She had been away from home for about two months.

Q: Why is it to Hong Kong Bank that you went?—I had heard that this man was employed there. When I went there and asked him for the whereabouts of my daughter he denied all knowledge of her.

Q: Did he write you a letter?—Yes, he did it after a lot of coaxing on my part.

The letter was dated February 13, and stated that the accused did not know the whereabouts of the complainant's daughter and that he did not wish to see her again.

Q: Did anything else happen at that interview?—He promised then that he would have nothing else to do with her, and I naturally believed him. Learning, however, later that he knew more about this case, I went in the afternoon of the same day and asked him to tell me more about it. I said, "If you will only tell me where is my daughter I will drop all the rest," and he said that he would go to his friends and find out and tell me later.

"Disappears" Again.

"I therefore went to Mr. Beatty, of the Hong Kong Bank and explained to him the circumstances and he said to this man (pointing to the accused) to go out and help me. A moment later I saw him take his hat and the next thing I knew was he had disappeared, while I was obliged to stand at the counter, wondering."

Complainant further stated that his daughter failed to return home on that night—February 13—and that he did not know where she was.

He next saw the accused the following morning at 135 Boone Road. "It was a small room on the top of the building, and had been locked from the inside. I knocked at the door for one solid hour."

Hole to Peep Through.

Witness had been getting more and more excited during the suspense, and as he was sure that his daughter was inside the room and his knocks on the door for about an hour had not drawn a response, "I took my pen-knife from my pocket and made a small hole on the door in order to enable me to just look inside. I saw my daughter lying on a bed, undressed. I was quite satisfied that she was there; I did not see anybody else."

"I called to my daughter again, and then she replied, 'If mother comes I will allow her to come in, but I don't want you to come in.'"

"Immediately I heard that Marques was in the room I called out to him and challenged him to meet me as man to man. There was no answer. I called out again and pleaded and pleaded. I wanted him to speak and say something. In the meantime my wife and daughter were standing beside me. In the meantime I was pushing the door again and again, which resulted in eventually breaking the panel of the door down, and just when I peeped through the opening, the accused struck me on my head with a bottle."

ISMAIL HAKKI

Hated War Leader
Returns to Turkey

RAIDS RECALLED.

Much interest has been aroused by the unexpected arrival in Istanbul of Ismail Hakki Pasha, the lame, whose very name fills with hatred many of those who suffered hardship during the Great War. He was at that time Under Secretary of the War Office and Director of Supplies Equipment and Transport. In this capacity he impounded without distinction anything on which he could lay hands. Merchants lived in perpetual fear of seeing their shops emptied, for his requisitions extended even to garments for women and children. Sometimes he blundered. Once he requisitioned a motor-car sent by the Kaiser to Enver Pasha. Another time he offered to Liman von Sanders, on the occasion of a visit to the Dardanelles, a chest of six bottles of wine, which happened to come from parcels addressed from Germany to the General.

On the eve of the signature of the Armistice of Mudros, Ismail Hakki disappeared. Since that time he has not lived in Turkey.

Passions have not yet subsided. The Ashkani and the Politika recall his activities during the war. It should, however, be said that he succeeded in feeding the Turkish Army under the most difficult conditions.

Like Talaat and Djemal Pasha, he symbolises the "Union and Progress" regime, which lasted from 1908 to 1918. It will be remembered that the most tragical fate befell many of those who shared power with Ismail Hakki Pasha.

Woman And The Mirror.

When a woman looks at her reflection in the glass and sees a pleasing, clear-complexioned face, she feels at peace with the world. But when a sorrowful, plump, melancholy visage confronts her she pities herself for its unsightliness.

Such unhappiness could be spared many women by the occasional use of Pinkettes, for usually these blemishes to beauty indicate only need of just the aid Pinkettes give. As a corrective of constipation, defective liver action, sluggish digestion, ill-smelling breath, facial blemishes due to irregularity of the daily habit, there is nothing better than these dainty little laxatives. Your chemist sells Pinkettes, price 80 cents per box.

BIG OPPORTUNITY.

Wealth in Antarctic Possessions.

"There is untold wealth to be obtained from the whales that abound in the Antarctic. British labour and enterprise is needed to go and hunt them!" stated Mr. H. J.
Sanders, M.A., F.R.G.S., the well-known traveller and lecturer, who has recently returned from South Georgia, in an interview in London.

"It was most disappointing to me during my Antarctic trip to find that Britain, although owning the Falkland Islands, which is the centre of the whaling industry, should enjoy so little of its spoils,"
he continued. "The industry is now earning a revenue of over £15,000,000 a year, a figure that is certain to increase since whale oil is the finest basis for the preparation of a large variety of essential commodities, including margarine and soap. Admittedly, there are a few British whaling companies which operate on a large scale, but so far the position occupied by Britain in the industry is not satisfactory.

"Almost the entire personnel of the whaling fleets is Norwegian.
Why should not Britons be

PORT OF BRISTOL.

The Position in February.

Foreign trade at the port of Bristol showed a small increase compared with the same period
a year ago; while there was only a slight falling off in the number of coastwise arrivals. Near Continental traders were the principal feature of the foreign trade at the inner docks, while seven fruiters and four grain-laden steamers were also accommodated. Grain was prominent in the list of foreign arrivals at Avonmouth with a dozen steamers for the month, but the overseas fuel oil trade was not so heavy as usual. In the West Indies service four Fyfe liners brought 315,000 stems of bananas, 10,000 bags of coffee and 2,000 cases of grape fruit.

At all three docks last month
there were 74 foreign arrivals with a register tonnage of 153,057, compared with 72 arrivals a year ago with a tonnage of 179,875, or an increase in arrivals of two, but a decrease in tonnage of 21,818.
Foreign imports were: General 35, grain 16, fruit 11, oil 4, and one each of wood-pulp, ore, asbestos,
stone, locust beans, meal, oil seeds,

Lacking other competition, Gar Wood, veteran speedboat champion of the world, has challenged his own record of 93.123 miles an hour, made last March on Indian Creek. Gar says he means to set a new world record of 100 miles an hour in the Miami Beach regatta before retiring from the field. "Miss America VIII," in which the speed king hopes to set his new record, is shown out for a trial run with Orin Johnson, chief mechanic, at the engine controls.

working there?" concluded Mr.
Sanders. "We hold a reputation for our love of the sea; for our ability to endure hardship, and for our love of adventure. Here is a field where all these qualities may be put to the test. Why has such a rich opening for work been left uninvestigated? I inquired about this when down in South Georgia, and I was told that the Britons would not do the work—we were too lazy. Are we going to accept this while there are hundreds of thousands of unemployed to-day?"

FALL FROM SHIP'S DECK

According to a report made at the Water Police Station, yesterday, a Chinese, named Chan Fu (25) was sent to hospital suffering from head injuries as the result of falling from the deck of the Azusa Maru, which was moored at Buoy 54.
The man is a coolie employed by the Green Island Cement Company at Hok On.

LIMERICK DOCKS' SCHEME

At a Limerick Harbour Board meeting the engineer (Mr.
O'Sullivan) presented amended plans for the proposed dock extension and railway link involving a combined outlay of £160,000, which includes an estimate as compensation for house property affected by the railway link. Alterations have been made in the dock scheme which provides for an addition to the present floating dock with an entrance at the western side, so that vessels could enter straight when proceeding up the river instead of being obliged as at present to turn. The amended plans are to be submitted to the Ministry of Commerce after having been considered by the board.

Mr. Roycroft, Limerick Steamship Co., who presided, submitted the annual report on the trade of the port, which in respect of some items showed a decrease on the results of the previous year.
Cattle exports were reduced by 1,694 head, and butter exports were also decreased. The balance in the bank to the credit of the board is £15,000, being about £1,424
less than a year ago.

The salvors are rigging gear for an endeavour to refloat the Admiral Benson, ashore at the entrance to the Columbia River, and although heavy weather prevails and the result may be serious, it is continued.
The insurance paid on her has fallen from £50 to £5,000 since the disaster.

There were 451 arrivals from coastwise ports with a register tonnage of 77,950, compared with 453
arrivals a year ago with a tonnage of 86,838, or a decrease in arrivals of two and in tonnage 9,883.
Coastwise imports totalled 79,085
tons.

Last month there were 43
foreign sailings with a register tonnage of 91,660, compared with 41 sailings a year ago with a tonnage of 111,887; an increase in sailings of two, but exports were:
General 29, and one each of carbon and coke. For coastwise ports there were 482 sailings last month, compared with 501 sailings last year with a tonnage of 163,038, or a decrease in sailings of 19 and in tonnage 19,693. Coastwise exports totalled 24,469 tons.

NEW GERMAN LINER.

Plans for Overhauls at Hamburg.

According to the Fremdenblatt, of Hamburg, negotiations are going on between the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg port authorities with a view to having repairs, overhauls, &c., requiring dry docking on the big North German liners done on the Elbe instead of at Southampton.

BIG EXPLOSIONS.

Spectacular Upheaval in New York.

CHOKING GAS

New York, Yesterday.
Two big centres were startled by a series of explosions yesterday.
At least ten persons were killed and a score injured in a Pennsylvania firework factory, near Philadelphia, starting with a terrific detonation and followed at intervals by minor explosions resembling machine-guns.

Bodies have been recovered which are unrecognisably charred.
An even more spectacular upheaval broke out at mid-day.

Brief subterranean rumblings were followed by terrific bangs. Tongues of flame shot from manholes, the covers of which were blown skyward like confetti. Pedestrians scattered before showers of gravel and paving stones.
Windows in buildings were shattered,
and the streets were filled with choking gas.

The neighbourhood was evacuated, except by police, who worked with gas masks. At least a dozen people were injured.

The explosions are attributed to the ignition of accumulations of gasoline vapour.—Reuter's American Service.

A fire on the British Honor, at Newcastle, N.S.W., might have proved serious, for she carries crude oil from Abadan for Brisbane, but, fortunately, it was confined to her upperworks. She is a motor-tanker, of 6,991 tons gross, built in 1928, and owned by the British Tanker Co., Ltd.

OIL EXPEDITION.

Dutch Plans in New Guinea.

Sourabaya, Yesterday.
The Netherlands Colonial Petroleum Company is sending out an expedition on April 17, in which two geologists will be participating, to conduct explorations in New Guinea, expected to last fourteen months.

The exploitation of the Colonial Petroleum Company's new concessions at Sangkel Irang Bay and Koetel, in Borneo, will start in June, 1931.

The Japanese Borneo Oil Company is preparing to exploit concessions at Koetel, for which large shipments of boring material and pipelines are being despatched at the end of April by several Dutch steamship lines.—Reuter.

FAST LUXURIOUS SERVICE

—to America
and Europe

TRAVELLERS bound for America or Europe avail themselves of speedy and comfortable service when they go Canadian Pacific.

The White Empresses are the largest, newest and fastest liners on the Pacific. They cross from Yokohama to Vancouver in 9 days; from Shanghai to Vancouver in 14.

These ships connect with the summer trains, "Trans-Canada Limited" and "Mountaineer," at Vancouver, enabling passengers to make the earliest sailing of a Canadian Pacific Atlantic liner.

NAVAL CONFERENCE.

Fertile Ground for Study.

DIPLOMATS IN REVIEW.

"Diplomacy may be easy on the brain, but it's rough on the feet," is one of the innumerable boni mots attributed to General Dawes.
Perhaps feet are not used quite so much in diplomacy as the American Ambassador suggests,
but his meaning is clear, says Sidney Huddleston in the Christian Science Monitor. There are fleets of automobiles—or motor-cars—and plenty of elevators—or lifts—and walking is not really obligatory. Nevertheless, naval diplomacy at London seems to be just one visit after another. It consists in coming and going, except when it consists in going and coming.

Andre Tardieu
Of all the comers and goers, Andre Tardieu easily holds the record. With him it is not merely a question of whether he is in the Ritz, or the Carlton, or Downing Street, or St. James's Palace.
It is a question of whether he is in London or Paris. He is here today and gone to-morrow.

Paris and London are, after all,
not far apart. And this is true both in a geographical and a diplomatic sense. In spite of the clearness of French views and the apparent fixity of French demands, there is relatively little doubt about the possibility of eventual accord. France certainly knows what it wants, and from the beginning M. Tardieu has dominated the conference by his vigorous personality. Whether we like or dislike his claims we must certainly admire his directness of attack.

Respective of his case, everybody at the conference has appreciated and applauded Tardieu.
He has scored a tactical triumph
by the precision of his arguments and the definiteness of his figures from the first days of the conference. Some appeared to be groping. That was, perhaps, their Anglo-Saxon way. Others appeared to be wearily waiting. That was, perhaps, their Oriental manner. But Tardieu knew what he wanted and expressed his wants with clarity. Perhaps that was Latin tradition.

Temperaments.
Indeed there has been a more interesting study in national temperaments than is presented at the London conference. There is the British blend of idealism and practicality, the American mixture of morality and shrewdness, the Japanese reserve and inscrutability, the Italian suppleness and subtlety, and the French logic and fieryness. There is a study, also, in individual temperaments, and as occasion offers we may con-

HONG KONG TIDE

The tide-table given below has been obtained by aid of the Tide-Predicting Machine, which includes 40 components for the better prediction of tides, from the result of the analysis of the tidal observations taken at the Kowloon tidal observatory under the direction of Dr.
Barker during the years 1887, 1888
and 1889.

The times and heights are given for Kowloon; but they may be used for the Victoria Naval Yard and Aberdeen, the differences being very small.
The times of high and low-water must not be considered to coincide with the times of slack-water and change of current, the two phenomena being quite distinct.

MATE'S MISCONDUCT.

Allegations of drunkenness and misconduct on his ship were made against Thomas Curtis (36), South Shields, second mate of the London steamer Latchmere, at an inquiry at Newcastle. He was charged that on certain dates between June and November last year, at Genoa, Buenos Aires, Bahia Blanca, and Santa Fe, while acting as second mate on the Latchmere, he was drunk and unfit to discharge his duties.

David Miller, master of the Latchmere, said that after three days in Genoa, Curtis was under the influence of drink. His appearance in the morning was a disgrace to the ship. On one occasion he struck the watchman with a hurricane lamp and threatened to strike witness.

Curtis was ordered to pay £5
costs and his chief mate's certificate was suspended for three months.

The mishap to the Europa, which stranded in the Elbe whilst proceeding to her trials, was not serious, but it must have given underwriters food for thought, for in spite of extensive re-insurances some heavy liabilities are held both in Britain and on the Continent.

The rate on the Kohshun Maru, ashore at Cape Inuboye, has risen to 50 guineas per cent, on a report that her bottom is holed, and that she is making much water.

RETURNING OFFICERS.

For the Steamer.

The young lady pictured above is all ready for a cruise, from the manner in which she is attired. She dons a blouse of silk crepe and a circular skirt of flannel that boasts light blue stars over a smooth white surface. The cape of blue flannel replaces the jacket of yore at the shoulders.

SPARE TYRE FIGURE.

Don't Have a Bulge Above the Waist

One of the most important things about choosing your foundation garments is to choose that style for your type that you can wear most comfortably and which will give a long, smooth, graceful line from under-arm to thigh. Anything less, that causes a bulge above the waist, known as a "spare tyre figure," will be hard for comfort, hard on the figure, on the dress, and assuredly hard on the eyes.

In this reverting to a waisted outline, corsets, as made to-day, must not be confused with the old-fashioned affairs, "mostly steel." To-day those foundation garments designed for even the heaviest figures can be folded into a small soft bundle, and depend on their cut alone to control the figure.

If fashion decrees that we are to make anew a mystery of our ankles, then we are to reveal all our wrinkles by baring our foreheads. Hats follow the line of the skirts, and dip to the back. You can do anything you like, with a hat, provided you don't give it a brim in front. Cover your neck and your ears, pleat and fold the felt till your fingers ache, but don't shade the eyes. Keep the crown shallow, and the more you can give a "surprised" look to your face the smarter you will be. Soft felt and velours will be pressed into service for the hatless occasion, and there will be limited use of fancy materials, such as the woven, knitted or crocheted crowns.

So having pulled her figure in to prove that somewhere or other she possesses a waist, pushed her hat as far back on her head as she can, the woman of 1930 will clutch her flying skirts wildly as she dashes for a bus or a tram. These are hardly the days for leisurely fashion, either in the ballroom or on the street.

SEVERE COIFFURES

Fashionable hairdressers have become expert in arranging severe coiffures—influenced, apparently, by the Italian paintings. The vogue is expressed by a flat smoothing of the hair from a centre parting, with a chignon at the back; but a slight concession to to-day's mode is to wave the side pieces. Again, lightly waved hair is finished with a roll across the nape of the neck ending in coils at either side—the roll is often attached and the effect is not so incongruous as it may sound.

HATS MUST MATCH.

We have had table mats in delicate pastel colours, and, later, vivid schemes were the vogue, harlequin effects being popular with some hostesses. The newest idea of all, however, is to have the fancy corn mat, and those of embroidered linen dyed to match the table they adorn. Linen of the natural colour goes with unstained wood, and for mahogany dining tables, the mats are coloured a rich red. This gives a nice effect of

THE BRIDE.

Why We Love to See Her.

Says a writer in the Sydney Sun: I heard a bachelor being ironic on the subject of what he called "Women's craze for watching weddings."

It seemed, to this satirical male, that there was abundant evidence to support the Victorian view of women as the weaker, and sillier sex. What man, he asked, would dream of standing hours in the rain to see two people, however charming, whom he did not know, entering church for the purely personal ceremony of marriage?

Ignoring several false assumptions in his statement, let us consider why women love to see a bride, and whether it is mere sentimentality that impels them to wait for hours, in the most disheartening conditions, to see her.

Women will agree with me, I hope, when I say that we love to see the bride because she typifies all that is most lovely and radiant in first womanhood. She becomes to us, for the moment, the personification of what every woman, in her most rapturous moments believes she one day was, or yet will be. She is the youthful, beautiful embodiment of the age-long mystery and allure of her sex.

Then again she represents to us, in a degree, the fulfilment of the natural destiny of womanhood. By her charms, she has triumphed. A conquered heart has been placed, as it were, at her feet. She has become the adored, the mate, the confident, yes, to the equal of man. She has vindicated our sex, and established our right to the love and protection of man, as his created, coeval companion and complement.

Finally, whatever we may profess to believe in our struggle not to be considered conventional and demodée, marriage means to every woman, in her secret heart, a binding, unbreakable, eternal sacrament. It is, in our ideals, the link forged by abiding love, strengthened by respect, and finally sealed by understanding. Every bride we see becomes to us the symbol of the perfect earthly marriage—the union of two faithful hearts, minds and bodies in perfect harmony.

Whatever may be our own griefs, whatever the tragic mistakes of our own past, for the moment they are forgotten. Our faith in the ideals and destiny of our sex is revived, and we share, as we gaze, in the glory and the radiance of the bride herself.

It is for these reasons, I am convinced, that we love to see the bride, and that we wait uncomplainingly in rain, cold and storm to see her, though it is only for a moment. We may not have reasoned it out thus to ourselves. Some of us may find excuse enough in the wealth, beauty, popularity, or even sometimes the notoriety, of a particular bride. But deeper than these stimuli to idle curiosity are those reasons I have indicated. And they will never be gainsaid. For they are part and parcel of the very being of woman. They have root in the primitive instincts and the natural habits of our sex.

Spring Fashions for Milady.

At the left, a young lady is displaying the latest spring costume of a St. Germain gown. The distinctive feature of this creation is the box pleat which circles the skirt. A flowing cape adds to the charm of the ensemble. At the right, smart simplicity is Harmony Features Spring Styles.

At the extreme left is pictured the latest creation in evening gowns, of peacock blue satin, trimmed with crystal. The skirt, with the bottom part long, circular and flowing, has a tightly fitting hip line. (Centre) A smart dress of heavy black crepe. The gown is made with a high waistline and medium long skirt with the uneven hem-line. Black felt hat, suede bag and black patent leather pumps with straps are used to give this gown the finishing touches. (Right) This comely dress is extensively patronised by film stars in Hollywood.

The streak of yellow running through the new Spring fashions is a delightful platform whereon blonde and brunette may meet with a satisfying knowledge of looking their best. For all shades of yellow are in vogue this year, the pale tints of greenish cast that are so becoming to the blonde as well as the deeper tones that suit the vivid darker colouring. That colour together with blue that runs the gamut from the palest pastel shades to dark navy are the two leaders for colour supremacy this season. Tweeds of light supple weave, taffeta, fine woolsens, heavy silk crepe, faille and heavy crepe de chine are the fabrics that will interest the material minded. During the Summer, chiffon and cotton fabrics will be a

ELEVATED WAIST.

Swish of Hems Round Heels.

We don't talk of Fashion this season.

Instead, we discuss the elevated waist and the swish of hems round our heels.

Why have the designers foisted these styles on suffering women, many of whom are already worn to nervous thinness following the intricacies of the 18-day diet?

For let it be clearly understood: although frocks have returned to old fashions, feminine figures have not returned to old shapes. Judging by some of the new evening frocks which have arrived in Hong Kong, women will need to be about seven feet tall, and the hips, which must be swathed, must be of the snake variety. The in-and-out variety of curving Venus is decidedly not wanted, and it looks as if the old bodice story—with corset laces and all—will, after the lapse of many years, again have more than a modicum of truth.

It is no use women saying they won't put their bodies into whale-bone again; only a very small percentage of femininity possess avelte lines, while the manufacturers have made the stocks 100 per cent. with defined waistlines, and trailing skirts. The trouble is that the fashions of 1930 are not quite old enough to be new; many of us can remember the bowdy horrors which some of the newest gowns resemble. It is all very well for men to say that if women the world over would wear another couple of inches on their skirts, a great deal of the unemployment would be eliminated. Those extra inches are likely to mean a hobbling of women's much-enjoyed freedom.

But in spite of any kicks and comments, high waists, moulded hips, and flaring skirts are definitely "in." It's no use trying to make-over last season's dresses by the addition of bits and pieces; you'll be detected at once.

And while you are replenishing your wardrobe, let the three B's be your guide—brown, beige, and blue, the last named darker than the royal, not so dark as navy. Ink-blue, in fact. You can add a fourth B for burgundy if you like, and if you stray with your colours, be careful of the dark dahlia tones. They are rather more like plum and mulberry, purple reds than the bright colours we associate with the flowers. Green, too, in good old-fashioned, bottle, hunter's Lantini and a billous, muddy green are also permitted. For evening wear, choose white if you can wear it, then black, egg-shell blue, peach, or orchardment.

SPEEDWELL BLUE

Speedwell blue was worn by the attendants at Miss Philippa Russell's wedding to Count Vladimir de Simeonoff on March 11 at St. Peter's, Cranley Gardens, London. While the Hon. Elizabeth Kemys-Tynte wore a blue veil with her speedwell blue georgette gown, the two other bridesmaids, who are both children, had blue Dutch caps. Both they and the bride carried lilacs-of-the-valley.

Changing wedding fashions have not only brought about a revival in favour of old-world caps for the bridesmaids, but lace is being used to a far greater extent in wedding gowns.

Miss Russell was, at all times, a bride, her dress consisting of a foundation of cream net which was covered with old English lace, with the train area of old English 1830 MOIRE.

For a 1930 Frock.

Stiff materials—especially moire and hachienne—a cross between moire and brocade—velvet and chiffons and lace—all are in the vogue for dancing frocks. For day wear choose flat crepes; very few "stuff" frocks will be worn.

Many of the new evening gowns follow the shape of skittles—often upon tier of narrow flutes, after alternating taffetas, lace and net, are shaped into a narrow skirt, the neck of the skittle being the waisted silhouette of the woman. The dresses with boleros and berthas could have been taken out of the cupboard fifty years ago.

Sports suits, 1½ inches from the ground, are made of tweed, and jersey cloth woven to simulate tweed, or kasha cross-stitched in conventional designs. All have skirts to the waist and tuck-in blouses.

The new silhouette, with its decided waist-line, accentuated bust-line, and well-moulded hips, is not the dream of the costumiere, nor the whim of the costumiere. The corset has so long been a silent, almost unacknowledged member of the wardrobe, but almost overnight the ignominy of its previous status has been made up for by fashion writers, lecturers and corset fashion shows.

Women of all dimensions, from the very ailmest, are returning to corsets, for the new figure outline makes them a necessity. As well throw your money away as wear your new model without benefit of corsetry, for even a sapling-like figure is more than likely to bulge when a naturally-placed, firmly-fitted belt is worn over an unmoulded silhouette.

SEX EQUALITY.

Communist "Marriage" in Sydney.

A Communist wedding recently conducted in Sydney, Australia, without minister of religion or a registrar, is described in a London journal of the movement.

Comrades Robert Shayler and Grace Peebles were then married under the following strange agreement:

"Our duty to the Communist party and to the working-class shall be given first consideration at all times.

"The form of marriage we recognise is the crossing of our hands over the emblem of the Communist International—the hammer and sickle on the red flag.

"Our home-life shall be based on real sex equality.

"Should either of the parties decide to separate, the following procedure shall be carried out:

"The other party to the agreement shall give the matter consideration for at least fourteen days, and, after consulting with the witness to this agreement, a decision shall be made and will be binding on all the parties concerned.

"In the event of one of the parties being found guilty of treachery to the movement or to the other party to this agreement, this union shall be broken forthwith.

"The provision for any children shall be the equal duty of both parents."

This "marriage," claiming first loyalty to the Communist movement, and cancelled if the branch thinks there has been any disloyalty, was followed by the singing of "The International" and a dance.

In Britain, as in Russia, prominent members have been dismissed on the ground of alleged disloyalties.

GLASS TOPS TO TABLES.

Glass shelves we have known for some time, but glass tops to tables, though not new, are not commonly used. The initial expense is somewhat heavy if a lot of glass is needed, but this is amply repaid by the protection afforded to the highly polished top of one's dressing table, or dining table. It is good to be able to admire the beauty of the wood without worrying about the polish being spoilt by heat marks, or scratches. Then, again, one economises on furniture cream, and, if a lace mat is put underneath the glass, it keeps clean much longer than if it were resting on top.

FOR YOUR NEXT PARTY.

Place-card holders are very amusing nowadays, and, if they are chosen wisely, can be persuaded to lend quite a charming colour note to the table. There are glass holders, made in the shape of queer birds and animals, which are quite ornamental. So also are the straight little vases, made of self-coloured or two-toned glass. One of these is placed by the side of each guest's plate, the card being in place at the back, while a single flower is placed in the vase. An amusing variation of this is the striped glass "vase" that looks like twisted peppermint rock.

A GOLDEN GLOW

A variety of lights are made for the bedside table, but perhaps the best lamp for anyone who reads in bed is fitted with a semi-circular shade which can be hung over the bed-rail. It has a weighted sash, and can, of course, be placed just where it is most convenient. The same device might be used on the back of a chair. These shades are prettily made from shot-taffetas in yellow and rose colours, and are trimmed with gold galon.

Pyjama Ensemble.

This blue and white pyjama ensemble with the collegiate trousers is the latest in slumland. A bandeau of blue and white crepe completes the sea-going harmony of this elegant outfit.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE.

Mannequins were being shown the other morning, how to make the most of their bridal veils in preparation for a parade of wedding fashions. They were to wear gowns of heavy materials, velvets, moire silks and satins, but all the veils were of net or tulle, some white, but the majority a soft, ivory colour. Laces and embroidered nets are not so popular. From pearl caps hung many yards of tulle, and quite a new idea is to have a two inch frill as an eye-veil. Here and there, pearls are wired to stand out, halo-fashion, around the head, but more often they follow the line of the head, and suggest helmets rather than Victorian bonnets.

CONFLICTING MILLINERY STYLES

At a small and exclusive fashion exhibition in Mayfair, the other day, a number of hats were displayed, all in the same material but conflicting styles. The material was a good quality, black velvet, and this was made into fitting helmets, and brimmed shapes, with scalloped edges, lifted off the forehead in front. But, in all the new millinery, the hats are cut low at the back. If you have growing tresses, they will be neatly hidden. Besides velvet, many unusual materials will be used this Spring. There are linen hats, and others of silk with exotic patterns, also satins, plain but of vivid colours.

CHIEF JUSTICE TO RETIRE

TWO PRESENTATIONS YESTERDAY.

WORK FOR THE COLONY

The retiring Chief Justice, Sir Henry Gollan, was the honoured guest at two gatherings at the Supreme Court yesterday. The first was a presentation by the local legal profession, and the second (in his Lordship's chambers) the gift of a silver salver on behalf of the staff, by Mr. R. H. W. Maynard, Clerk to the Chief Justice.

The Attorney-General, Sir Joseph Kemp, made the first presentation, and in the course of a brief speech, paid tribute to His Lordship's work for the Colony.

His Lordship was presented with a beautiful silver salver, inscribed with the following words: "Presented to Sir Henry Gollan, C.B.E., K.C., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Hong Kong, on his retirement, by members of the legal profession, Hong Kong, April 4, 1930."

Public Work.

In making the presentation, the Hon. Attorney-General said:—I have been asked to make this presentation on behalf of both branches of the legal profession practising in this Colony. You are leaving us, but we shall remember you in many ways. As members of the community we much appreciate the manner in which you have undertaken public tasks quite beyond the duties of your office. In particular we think of your services to the University of Hong Kong, an institution which I think is full of great possibilities, and which ought to be helped and fostered by everyone in the Colony. You have set us a striking example.

As members of the legal profession, and I say this without any flattery whatsoever, we shall look back to the best Chief Justice we have ever had or are ever likely to have. (Applause.) As those who have been honoured with your friendship, we shall miss your charming conversation, your wit, your humour, your great interest in everything, and your unfailing courtesy.

In asking you to accept this memento of your life and services here, we wish you a long and happy life. (Applause.)

Sir Henry's Reply.

In reply his Lordship said:—Mr. Attorney-General, you have made me very proud to-day. There are many and various reasons for my feeling flattered, but none quite so compelling as an appreciation of one's fellow workmen.

I first of all became a law officer of the Crown in 1900 and a judge in 1901, and during 30 years I have been engaged in different Colonies in the administration of the law, sometimes in somewhat primitive conditions. I have held my Court under a gigantic silk cotton tree and dispensed what, I hope, was true patriarchal justice.

In Northern Nigeria, even up to the time when I left the Protectorate, there were no practising members of the legal profession there, but I had a very clever clerk from Sierra Leone, who applied to me for admission as a practitioner. He was so clever that I could not help wondering why he had left his native country and so I made enquiries into his past. I found that he had made a slight mistake as to the legal title of some property and that an unsympathetic magistrate had given him six months. (Laughter.) But he remained my clerk. He was good at work, he could not be easily replaced, and in primitive conditions one adopts a benevolent if somewhat primitive attitude towards human action.

Good Feeling.

Since 1904 I have been working with my fellow members of the legal profession and I am proud to say that my experience supports the time-honoured tradition of good feeling within our profession. I attach the highest importance to this state of feeling because I believe that it profoundly affects the proper administration of justice. I believe that one of the causes of that state of feeling is that a judge usually goes through the ordinary traditional mill and knows from first-hand knowledge the difficulties that attend practising in the Colony.

I acknowledge, and I accept with very deep gratitude, the kindness which has brought you all here to-day, and the handsome present which you have made to me. I am taking away from Hong Kong a very goodly store of memories, and not the least gratifying recollection will be the good fellowship which I have always found among you. Mr. Attorney-General, I am proud to wish you success in your new post.

ROUND THE CINEMAS

U.S. Marines Sing Movietone March.

"COCK-EYED WORLD."

In the Fox Movietone picture, "The Cock-Eyed World," directed by Raoul Walsh, 600 marines aboard the U.S.S. Henderson, sing a marching song "So Long," written for this all talker by Con Conrad, Sidney Mitchell and Archie Guttler. Conrad went to San Francisco personally rehearsed the marines and also the U.S. Navy Band.

Before the production was finished, Walsh received word from the Orient that the marines were still singing this song, having adopted it as their marching song.

The U.S.S. Henderson is now in Oriental waters with practically the entire complement of marines who appear in this particular sequence.

"The Cock-Eyed World" based on a story by Stalling and Anderson, with dialogue by Billy K. Wells, features Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita. This big rollicking picture which will open to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre, deals with the love affairs of two "hard boiled" marines.

WEALTH OF MALAYA

"It is time that the British Empire woke up to the fact that it owns valuable raw products in the rare metals, molybdenite, scheelite, wolfram and tin, as well as rubber and many other commodities," said Mr. John McKeown, a mining engineer who has had over 30 years' active experience on all the important tin fields of the world, with the exception of Nigeria, when interviewed by the "West Australian Standard" recently. "I have often heard it said by Americans visiting the Malay States, that if they owned the raw products of the British Empire they would make the world pay their war debts. If British raw products were in American hands neither the Empire nor Australia would be in the financial position in which they stand to-day."

The Malay States, from which Mr. McKeown recently arrived in Perth, were, he said, the richest part of the Empire by virtue of their production of tin and rubber. The world's production of tin was between 150,000 and 165,000 tons a year, and of that the Malay States produced 65,000 tons, while the Malayan rubber output represented the bulk of the world's production.

In spite of their wealth, he said, Mr. McKeown, "it is said that Northern Canada is the only unexplored goldfield in the world. But I say that northern Burma is another. At present northern Burma supplies the gem stones of the world. The famous Chinese jade actually does not exist. It all comes from Burma. Emeralds, sapphires, rubies and innumerable other gems all come out of the Shan States in the north."

"Unemployment Rife." In spite of their wealth, he said, throughout the Malay States unemployment was rife. The wealth of the Malay Peninsula in raw materials was exploited by Americans. An early American attempt at the exploitation of the tin production by exporting tin oxide to the United States had been checked by an Order in Council made by the Governor of the time, prohibiting the export of tin oxide until it had been smelted in the colony.

"America rules the world market in rubber, tin and raw metals," concluded Mr. McKeown. "Buying four fourths of the world's tin either in London or the Malay States Americans yet pay no more than they are prepared to offer. Had America the control of the production of those materials they would be handled by trusts and combines which would command their own prices."

Mr. R. W. H. Maynard, clerk to the Chief Justice, presented his Lordship with a silver salver on behalf of the staff of the Supreme Court, on the occasion of his retirement from Hong Kong, on April 5, 1930.

In making the presentation, Mr. Maynard said:—My Lord, on behalf of the staff of the Supreme Court I hope that you will accept this inscribed silver salver. You have been with us as Chief Justice for nearly six years, and during that time you have always treated the staff in a gentlemanly manner, and although your Lordship is now proceeding on leave of absence, you will be remembered by all of us as a very kind and generous master.

TORTURE OF CATS.

Legs Broken and Ears Mutilated.

A 12-year-old girl's cruelty to three cats, was described at Ipswich Police Court.

It was stated that one animal had both hind legs broken and had paralysis of the spine. Another had part of an ear missing, broken tail, and other injuries. The girl said: "I used to play school with them. I must have hit them too hard when I gave them the cane."

The girl was placed on probation, and Harry Smith, aged 78, a police pensioner, of Raydon, was fined £1 and 2s costs for aiding and abetting the girl.

AT LAST!

Money Made in Aberdeen!

The story of an Englishman who went to Aberdeen, made £1,800 profit on a deal in billiards, and then returned to England suffering from over-confidence and lost all his money in Lancashire and Cheshire, was told at Manchester County Court, when Gilbert Philip, of Walmer Place, Habsbury Street, Moss Side, was granted a discharge in bankruptcy subject to a suspension of one month.

It was stated that Philip, after returning from Aberdeen, purchased a tea garden at Lynton, Cheshire, and lost £1,800.

A SILK SEASON.

Italian Influence on Materials.

Stripes and spots for smart sports and tailored suits, as well as for more formal clothes, will ensure a popular silk season. Earlier in the season it was feared that the new wool-weaves would be sufficient for the most festive occasions, but some time ago (writes the Hon. Mrs. C. W. Forester in the London Daily Telegraph), I foresaw that the Italian influence on materials, as well as colours, and also the dressier trend, in fashion, would demand fabrics of luxury.

The latest aspect of the silk-tailored suit, with its semi-sporting air, is, however, suggestive of simplicity. Some of the latest suits only show a coat in silk to which a wide belt or band of the same is added, worn with a skirt of wool that contains one of the shades of the silk, and a shirt of cambric. But, smartest of all, are entire suits of silk, severely tailored, with chemisettes of fine lawn and lace.

The bold Roman stripe, in definite, but softly blended shadings, is one vogue. A large spotted foulard with a border of pin-spot is another. Graduated stripes in green on a grey-green ground are charming; so is a pinky-red, with large white spots trimmed with the same colours in the tiny pin-spot design.

Plain suits of black, faille have waistcoats and tiny collars and cuffs of white pique. A small brown and white checked silk suiting has a skirt and trimmings of beige, georgette, edged with narrow lace.

Surah-silk in navy blue may have a banded basque coat and outside seams in the circular skirt as well. This has a sheer-lawn blouse of pale green, and is worn with a beret of navy and green-speckled straw.

More suited for country wear, but a very smart revival, is a loose straight box-cut coat of grey-glaze worn over a neat-pleated skirt of grey covert-coating. The coat has a buttonhole in yellow, and a semi-shady cloche in white. The tailor will be quite busy with his silk suits all this summer, for they are a very important vogue.

Tennis frocks are made of crepe-de-Chine, and are also in these new fancy silks. Crepon is another silky cotton fabric from the "Nineties" that is very attractive. Faille, spun silk, and the masculine Surah-shirting, are all used.

A MASTER CRIMINAL.

Three Brutal Murders
and Robberies.

MORE UNREVEALED

The notorious gang-leader, Song Sio Loh-tse, who was arrested by the French Police, has confessed to an amazing record of crime committed by him and under his direction.

At a special hearing, members of the police were kept busy taking notes of the various details connected with the crimes committed by this master mind of Shanghai's underworld.

Song has been responsible for no fewer than three assassinations, the first having been committed in July 1927, when a man named Wang Ching-fah was murdered in the Boulevard de Montigny. Shortly after this date, another victim was accounted for in Chapel, the motive in this case being personal vengeance. The third murder took place in April, 1928, and proved to be quite a sensational, which was fully reported in the press at the time. On this occasion, the chief coolie of the Shanghai and Hongkong Wharf was killed in cold blood
by a gang of five armed ruffians, including Song.

Besides the three major crimes reported above, Song was also responsible for seven armed robberies operated on a large scale, and in one case this master criminal even had the audacity to attack the Bank of China in Kiangning, when a sum of $40,000 fell to the hands of the robbers.

It will not be surprising to learn that, when the police investigations are completed, Song will have an enviable record in Shanghai's underworld, which will be difficult to beat.—China Press.

MODERN 'DINOSAUR.'

Nasty Shock for Scientists.

The London correspondent of the Star cables that the "skeleton of a Dinosaur" discovered near Tetuan, Morocco, has turned out to be the remains of a hay-making machine.
A cable to the Times from Tangier says the members of a scientific mission from Madrid, having completed their examination, have arrived at this conclusion.

All the evidence points to the hay-making machine belonging to a mysterious "reptile" having been a Spanish farmer who abandoned his property in 1917 during the Rif War, and whose scanty agricultural machinery was enveloped in a landslip caused by heavy rains that winter.

Although the original investigators erred in mistaking the curved teeth of automatic rakes for the ribs of a species of dinosaur known previously only in the Rocky Mountains, they were clearly right in giving a trans-Atlantic origin to their discovery, for the machine
bears the name of a well-known Canadian manufacturer of agricultural implements.

When first discovered this "monster" was accorded all sorts of ages up to 50,000,000 years.

"It is impossible," remarks the Times in a leader, "not to sympathize with the learned world, nor is it any consolation to them to be reminded that, properly viewed,
rusty iron is an extreme antiquity.
There is indeed plenty of ground for disquiet among scientists. What has happened at Tangier will happen with increasing frequency elsewhere."

SHOCKING CRIME

Three Persons Murdered
by Person Unknown.

Three Chinese—two women and a man—were brutally done to death in a shop on Pulo Ubin. The only witness of the shocking affair was an infant of about eight months old who was lying beside its mother, in bed when the mother was killed; her assailant ripping open her chest with a knife or some other sharp instrument. The proprietor of the shop, returning after a visit to another shop some distance away, found the body of the first victim, a woman. She was the wife of a man employed at the shop and who was also away from the premises at the time. Apparently she had been met first and judged from the knife wound in the region of her stomach
she must have died very shortly after being attacked. In a room at the back of the shop the proprietor found the body of the second victim, a man who was lodging at the shop. He had been brutally killed.

WHITE SLAVERY.

Excitement Among Berlin Public.

DRAMATIC INCIDENTS.

Berlin, February 27.

The public is galvanised by what is alleged to be a case of white slavery in which the police is powerless to interfere. The notoriety case arose from dramatic incidents accompanying the departure from a Berlin railway station of a number of dancers under a contract for Buenos Aires when relatives attempted to persuade several girls to abandon the journey and in two cases succeeded in spite of angry remonstrances of an elderly woman of unsavoury reputation acting as manager of the troupe.

Meanwhile the girls embarked at Hamburg, and the press, sensa-tioning the case, is severely criticising the police for the failure to prevent their embarkation and to arrest the manager. The police authorities however insist that since all girls are of age, they could not be denied passports and go wherever they liked.

Moreover it is declared that the dancers' contract was approved by the artists' union and that nothing has been known of the manager to prepare a charge against her. The Argentine Consulate had refused the party the visé whereupon the manager declared the troupe would travel to Montevideo and thence slip across the La Plata river into Buenos Aires.

BRITON AS CHINESE!

Eccentric Collector and His Mysterious Life.

A Briton who liked to live as a Chinese and amassed a collection of sacred Chinese treasures at the risk of religious vengeance, died from heart failure at his home in Manchester recently.

He was Mr. John Hilditch, one of the best-known collectors of Chinese art in the country. It is claimed that his collection of nearly 60,000 objects is worth £2,500,000.

Mr. Hilditch was the great mystic of Manchester. He had two large houses, Miglands, in Cheetham-hill, and Peking Villa, in Victoria Park, where most of his treasures were stored. Adjoining the latter was a magnificent temple, said to be the greatest outside China. It contains beautiful shrines which he claimed to have been taken from the most sacred temples of China. There Mr.
Hilditch, dressed in Chinese costume, regularly conducted services according to the ritual of Confucius. Visitors would marvel at the mysticism of the proceedings—the sounding of fifty gongs, the throwing of sacred rice, the burning of Oriental spices, and the gradual passing from darkness to light as the service progressed.

Nearly Buried Alive.

He had many stories to tell of his adventures in forbidden temples and palaces. One of them described how he was buried alive
by priests, and rescued after he had been in the earth with only his head projecting for many hours.

Seventeen years ago he "hoaxed" Manchester into according a civic reception to a party of distinguished "Chinese mandarins," who were in reality some of his friends dressed up to deceive the authorities.
The "mandarins" were welcomed by the Lord Mayor and shown over the various places of interest in the city. Mr. Hilditch acting as "interpreter." The hoax was only revealed by him a few years ago.

For twenty years Mr. Hilditch had waged a fierce controversy with the Manchester Art Gallery Committee in an unsuccessful attempt to secure recognition of his collection. His idols, porcelains, potteries, bronzes, tapestries, and paintings have not been shown in the City Art Galleries and Museums, though the authorities once made an offer to exhibit a small selection. This was rejected.
As a result of his dispute with the Art Gallery Committee he revoked a decision to hand over to the city a £250,000 selection from his treasures and announced that he would divide the legacy between South Kensington and Bedford, which had given him facilities for exhibiting. Portions of his collection have been shown in Bedford, Rockdale, Leigh, Batley, and other towns.

The value of the collection has been the subject of much controversy, and when experts engaged by the Art Gallery Committee had given a low estimate, Mr. Hilditch produced a letter from a Japanese syndicate making him an offer of £2,500,000.

Have You Heard?—

Sandy McPherson was travelling to Glasgow. He took out a bottle, and drew the cork. A clergyman remonstrated, "Excuse me, sir, but I am sixty-five years of age, and I have never tasted a drop of whisky."
"Dinna worry yersel," said Sandy,
"You're no' guan tae start noo."

Gentleman (to street pedlar):
"Call these safety matches? Why, they won't light at all!"
Pedlar: "Well, wot could yer 'ave safer?"

Mrs. Watson: "I am getting stouter all the time." Mr. Watson: "Yes, when I got married I little realised that I was getting a wife on the instalment plan!"

An Irishman who was signing articles on board a ship began to write his name with his right hand, then, changing the pen to his left hand, finished it.

"So you can write with either hand, Pat?" asked the officer.
"Yes, sir," replied Pat. "When I was a boy my father always said to me: 'Pat, learn to cut your fingernails with your left hand, for some day ye might lose your right.'"

A certain member of a country club was not very popular because of his ostentation and jewellery.
One Sunday two club members were watching this gentleman hack his way round the golf course.
"Weak with his clubs, isn't he?"
said one.
"Yes, but strong in diamonds," remarked the other.

A young married woman, full of idealism, met an older woman, also married. "How's your husband?"
asked the young woman.
"Pretty well, I think. He works so hard, I see him about one hour a day."

"Oh, you poor thing! I sympathise."
Oh, no, dear. It's all right. The hour soon goes."

At a fashionable ball a young woman, who had been sitting out several dances, was delighted to see one of the handsomest men in the room approaching. He halted before her, and bowed.

"May I have this?" he asked.
Smiling, she arose, prepared to tread a jazzy measure.
"Ah, thank you," he said, picking up a Spanish shawl upon which she had been sitting, and went off with it.

FOOTBALL BY RADIO.

Sectional Chart For To-day's Game.

With the aid of the above chart, radio enthusiasts will be able to follow the progress of the football match this afternoon, when the Somersets meet the Royal Navy in the final for the Senior Shield. As reported in the China Mail yesterday, a running commentary on the game is to be broadcast from the field, and the observer will indicate the sections of the ground in which play is taking place by referring to them by number, as marked on the chart.

Chinese Pair in Semi-Final at the H.K.C.C.

MASTERLY SULLIVAN.

Kong Too-cheung and Ho Ka-lau, perhaps the foremost Chinese pair, yesterday defeated A. L. Sullivan and F. A. Redmond by three sets to one after a very even game.

The score in the first set was four all before the Chinese exerted themselves to take the set at 6-4. In the second set, mainly due to the brilliance and enterprise of Sullivan the British pair took the set at 6-4. The third set proved the most exciting. At one time the losers were within an ace of taking the set, but allowed their opponents to draw level and win at 7-5. The fourth set saw the Chinese well on top, and they won the set and match for the loss of two games.

Sullivan played the game of his life, and it must have been disappointing to him that his partner was not quite up to his usual standard. His powerful forehand drives invariably found their mark, but he lacked accuracy in his ground volleys. Kong and Ho played well and quite deserved their success, but they will have to reach a higher standard in order to beat the Fincher brothers.

Results in detail were:—
Open Championship Doubles (third round).—Kong Too-cheung and Ho Ka-lau beat A. L. Sullivan and F. A. Redmond, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

Handicap Singles "A" (third round).—P. W. J. Plummer beat Dr. L. T. Ride, 6-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Handicap Doubles (second round).—A. D. Humphreys and G. R. Sayer beat E. R. and T. J. Price, 6-4, 7-5. Dean Swann and L. Forster beat T. C. Monaghan and N. L. Railton, 8-6, 6-2.

SWIMMER'S PROTEST.

Excluded from Ship's Bath.

Strong comments are made by Miss R. H. Greenall in her report on the recent British women swimmers' South African tour, which came before the annual general meeting of the Amateur Swimming Association Council at Bournemouth.

"The team travelled second class on the boat," states Miss Greenall.

"While for a large group this might be absolutely satisfactory, for a small one, made up of young girls dependent for their social life on their fellow-passengers, it was open to criticism.

"Incidentally, it meant the exclusion of the British team from the ship's swimming bath, which was available for first-class passengers only."

THE ATHLETIC AGE

Baseball it is, apparently, that makes the world go round. The President of the United States draws $15,000 a year; "Babe" Ruth, the baseball player, has up to the present received a meagre $14,000, but has just signed a contract for two years at $30,000 (gold) a year. Athletics are more than politics in this year of grace, and nobody would listen to Socrates to-day were there a chance of looking at Suzanne. Homer would be quite outshone by his Helen Willis;

Jack "Kid" Berg, the "punching pinwheel" of Whitechapel, warms up on the mechanical cars while training for his fight with Mushy Callahan in Albert Hall, London. The "Kid" who recently returned to London from a triumphal whirl through America, has reversed the usual story of the "prodigal son." Instead of letting them kill the fatted calf for him, Berg brought his fatted calf back with him in the form of a few thousand dollars.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

THE BUNNIES GO BLACK-BERRYING.

Billy and Bobby Bunny came down to breakfast one sunny morning in rather a bad temper, for they were feeling bored and didn't know what to do with themselves or where to go that day. Mother Bunny was very good and generally arranged to take them somewhere on Saturdays, but she was expecting visitors and was too busy to spare the time.

The boys had just begun to eat their porridge when there was a sharp rap at the front door. "It must be the postman," said the mother; "run and open the door, Billy." Bobby and he ran together, and who should be standing there but Master Percy Piglet, looking very brown after his seaside holiday.

"Hullo, boys, where's your mother?" he asked cheerily, as he took off his cap.

Hearing his squeaky little voice, Mrs. Bunny appeared.

"Well, Percy, what is it this time?" she inquired pleasantly. "Please, Mrs. Bunny, do let the children come with me to-day, and I'll take ever such care of them. I've heard there are heaps and heaps of blackberries, ripe in Farmer Jones' lane. We can have a picnic and bring home a lot of berries for tarts and jam. Say 'Yes,' please," he added very politely.

"Well, I don't suppose you can get into any mischief if you simply walk there and back. I'll give you all an early lunch, and you can come home in time for tea with Mr. and Mrs. Belgian Hare and their family."

It wasn't very far to the lane, and the Bunnies, who had never seen blackberries before started at once to eat all they picked.

Percy got cross with them, for after half an hour, there wasn't a berry in any of their baskets. "Come on, boys, and play the game. I promised your mother we should fill these baskets, and I mean to keep my word, so whistle all the time and get to work."

The Bunnies felt rather ashamed of themselves and worked very hard. Bessie, too, joined in with a will and quickly filled her basket, and started to help Percy fill his.

All of a sudden they missed Yellowhead, and, looking round, saw her busily eating up all Bessie's berries. Her feathers were dyed black, and her wings were all sticky and dirty.

Bessie burst out crying, and between her sobs called out: "Oh you, greedy, greedy, girl, Yellowhead! I never should have believed it of you. I'll never ask you to tea again, or to a picnic, or anything. Never, never, never," and she stamped her foot at Yellowhead who was so frightened that she flew away home.

Billy and Bobby comforted Bessie and filled up her basket from their own. Percy, too, gathered a lot more and handed them over, so that when they showed Mrs. Bunny the result of their outing she said they had been good children.

Clever!

Tommy's school report had just arrived, and, as usual, it was a bad one.

"My boy," said his father in the same way that he said it at the end of each term, "I'm tired of this. How is it that young Jones, who is two years younger than you, is at the top of his form, while you are at the bottom?"

"Well, dad, Jones has very clever parents," replied Tommy.

A Howler.

Teacher: "Now, boys, what is a vacuum?"
Johnny: "Please, miss, it's where the Pope lives!"

BEDTIME STORY.

Years ago, in a place nobody ever heard of, there was situated a town called Blot (at least, that is the nearest I can get to the original name, which had no vowels, and a great deal of V's in it).

All the people who lived in Blot had huge opinions of themselves and were possessed of very long tongues, so long that they could lick the tips of their noses quite easily.

Their stock of knowledge was of startling dimensions, and visitors to the town quickly became nervous wrecks. Then they were compelled to depart, as they thought of their wives and families, and they used to weep bitterly, and vow that never should their descendants be submitted to the ordeal of living with the Blottites.

Every decade the population decreased, because the people used to fight to the death every time they quarrelled. You see, they had such hot tempers that they couldn't curb them, and they grew hotter and hotter, so that the undertakers had to work overtime.

No other town would have anything to do with them, though they were sorry for them, because they were unhappy, and had gone too far to ever be happy again.

They will never be let loose among us, anyhow, because they had a great battle, wherein the remainder of the population, one by one, had fallen, like King Arthur's knights, and only two remained, and went away to different towns lest they should quarrel.

So, if you ever meet a person who has an abnormally long tongue, and knows everything, and has a bad temper, you will know that they are the unfortunate descendants of the last Blottites, and pity them accordingly.

WHY? WHY? WHY?

Four-year-olds are awful! Joan's pet word is "Why." She always demands an answer to her "whys" too.

I said: "It looks as if it's going to rain."

"Why?" asked Joan.
"Clouds," I answered briefly.
"John Brown, I see," said Dad, "hanged himself."

"Why?" asked Joan.
"You're too young to understand," Dad said severely, but Joan wasn't dashed.

"Why?" she queried.
"You haven't lived long enough to be old enough to understand enough to be told about John Brown," Jim volunteered this mixed information.

Joan for once was thinking the affair over, so didn't ask "why."

"That billy-goat'll have to be shot," Jim declared hotly.
"Why?"—Joan wasn't thinking any longer.

"Because," said Jim, "he eats all the vegetables and boots."

"Why?" asked Joan.
"Just to be mischievous," I said.
"Mr. Davis is going home," Mum said.

"Why?" said Joan.
"Because he is run down," said Dad.
"Who run him down?" queried Joan. Dad glared.

And Jim giggled.
I said: "He's ill, Joan."
"Why?" said the young hopeful.

"Why? Why? Why!" stormed Dad. "Look up the encyclopedia and see."

Joan is quite irrepressible, and nearly said: "Why?"
Mum instead said: "Have some bananas, Joan dear."

Not Right?

Joan: "Mummy, you know that new razor you gave daddy for Christmas?"

Mother: "Well?"
Joan: "Bobbie's sharpening it on the kitchen step—that's not right, is it?"

Fond Expectation

Teacher: Can anyone tell me where Evelyn Jenkins is?
Small Scholar: Please, miss, Evelyn Jenkins won't be at school to-day. She expects to become a sister.

ROUND THE CAMP FIRE

DO YOU KNOW?

How many parts are there in a pin-point?

As many as there are separate molecules in the point. The diameter of a molecule of iron has never been indisputably measured. But it is certainly little larger than the millionth of a millimetre. A million molecules could therefore easily sit on a pin's point.

How is stone made?

Firstly, by the assembling of particles of matter through the winds or the waters; then by pressure of more and more reaped-up materials, or by height of water, as in the sea, above it, and, perhaps, finally, by heat in the earth's interior.

Why does a stone sink?

Because the molecules of its particles of matter are heavier than those of water.

Can water wear away a stone?

It can carry away the surface particles of a stone, as gradually it lifts the surface and loosens it.

What happens to all the dust?

It falls into the sea; it is carried over the world by the winds. It mingles with the soil, or in millions of years is forced into soils and may become stone.

Is it possible to make gold?

No; we know no way yet. But if we had the power to split up atoms we could break up the mercury atom to make atoms of thallium, and break up the thallium to make gold.

Were the old alchemists right?

They were right in supposing that one element might be transmitted into another; wrong in supposing it could be done by chemical means or by temperatures such as they could obtain.

Why does a cork float?

Because its vegetable fibre and the air mixed with it are lighter than water.

LOCAL GIRL GUIDES' ACTIVITIES

INTERESTING NOTES FROM PACK AND COMPANY

WINNING THE TOTEM

In conclusion, we are proud that we have passed a very successful year and attained many achievements. We only hope that the year to follow will be crowned with greater success.

3rd Kowloon Pack
The Pack was started in April 1929, and twelve keen little girls joined up. The meetings were held in the Garrison School, Kowloon, on Saturday afternoons at 2.15 p.m.

It was decided to have two sixes, and Elvies and Pixies were chosen respectively.

On May 11, 1929, Miss Jaques came over and enrolled eleven who were ready and had passed their Recruit Test. It was such a happy day, the Brownies had been looking forward to wearing their brooches.

We have a silver paper collection: each Brownie brings as much as she can and this is kept in the "Hospital Box" until a fair amount has been collected. The silver paper is destined for a hospital in Britain, and it is quite a competition to see which Six can bring the most. Perhaps some other Packs would like to join in with us.

During the summer we had a picnic, which the Brownies enjoyed tremendously.

Before we closed for the Summer holidays three others joined and were awaiting enrolment.

1st Hong Kong Company
This Company started the year with only six members, the remnants of three patrol—Shamrock, Clover and Snowdrop. This was due to the fact that it is an open European company, whose recruits come from various parts of the Colony. As the numbers are affected by families going on leave or going home for good.

During the winter term they worked as one patrol, the time being spent chiefly on end class work. On January 3, three Guides re-joined from leave, and were already being sent back to their original patrols.

The patrols were reformed, Shamrock, Clover and Snowdrop.

On February 5 one new recruit was enrolled, and on the 6th the whole Company was present at St. Paul's Girls' School for the Prince of Wales' Banner Competition.

The ambulance and cooking work necessary, afforded much interest and amusement at Company meetings for several weeks beforehand, the cooking especially being a "foreign" subject to most.

Two German recruits joined in March, and a Brownie from the Garrison School Pack joined in April. On April 23 three Guides were enrolled and two Guides went home for good, leaving our numbers at twelve for the rest of the year.

Six Guides attended the special service in St. John's Cathedral on Empire Day, and the rest went to a similar service in the Roman Catholic Cathedral. Our Assistant Colony Commissioner, Miss Jaques, inspected the Company on May 23, and reported favourably on the general conduct and smartness.

TO WATERPROOF A TENT.

Many readers have been asking how to waterproof a tent. Here is the recipe given in Gilecraft's Making a Tent.

Boil an ounce of isinglass in a pint of soft water until it is quite dissolved, and strain through a second saucepan. Dissolve a quarter of an ounce of white Castile soap in a pint of water, strain as before, and add to the first solution. Dissolve an ounce of alum in two pints of water, strain and add.

Stir and heat the combined solution over a slow fire until the liquid simmers, when it is ready for use. The solution should be applied while still hot to the outer surface of a tent with a small, flat brush, care being taken to work it well into the seams.

and Clover. On January 2 two recruits joined, one—a German girl having learnt English especially for the purpose, which shows a very real enthusiasm on the part of the Guide friend who encouraged her to do so. At the end of this month we had to give up our meeting place at Government House, owing to building alterations, and for two weeks met at the Helena May, until we were kindly given leave by the Army Education authorities to meet permanently at the Garrison School near the bottom Peak Tram Station.

ROVER SCOUTS "SERVICE."

Because of their own generally expressed wish, the work of blood transfusion carried on by Rover Scouts is little known. A typical report of this life-saving work performed by these elder Boy Scouts—young men roving into manhood—comes from Northampton. In that town no fewer than eleven lives have been saved and twenty blood transfusions given by the Rovers of one Scout Group alone since 1928. In that year, when the General Hospital made an appeal for donors of blood for patients, the Rover Scouts of the Group responded en masse and offered their services without payment as a practical interpretation of their service. One Rover has given his blood on three occasions, and several have done so twice, and the hospital authorities are loud in their praise. A similar service on a considerable scale by Rover Scouts has been going on in London and many other large districts for some years. Thus, apart from the multitudinous lives rescued and services rendered by members of the Scout movement—a considerable number of people can say definitely that they owe their lives to the service rendered by a member of the Scout movement.

The Stalker's graphs of bush animals or birds taken, developed and printed by yourself earns you the Stalker Badge, which many Boy Scouts have not troubled about.

In reality this is real scout work, for it calls for cautiousness and, greatest of all, patience. Lying in wait for perhaps hours on end or stalking the animal causes you to exercise the cunning of a wild Indian. A STORY FOR SCOUTS.

An interesting lecture, more in the nature of a story, was given by Major Cassal to the boys of the 2nd Hong Kong (St. Andrew's) Group, in the Church Hall last evening.

The speaker recounted some of his many vivid experiences with big game hunting in Nairobi, where he shot several lions.

Major Cassal took part in the Matabel Expedition with Lord Robert Baden-Powell, the Chief Scout, and he also figured in the Boer War.

He indicated his willingness to speak in the near future on the folk superstitions of the native tribes of Africa, in regard to earthquakes.

One instructor said that not one boy in fifty does these things correctly without being taught, yet it makes a great deal of difference to his health and strength. Sometimes it means all the difference between good and bad health.

Tale of Prairie Life.

["Fighting Caravans," by Zane Grey; Hodder & Stoughton, 7/6.]

This is certainly one of the most thrilling of Zane Grey's tales of Prairie life. It is the story of a young boy, Clint Belmont, whose indomitable spirit carries him through some blood-curdling encounters with ruthless Indian raiders. Robbed of his parents, who are both massacred during the caravan's onslaught by the Redskins, he carries on, driving his father's waggon of valuable freight. The fascination of the plains holds him, in spite of all their horrors and hardships, and he becomes famous among the great band of frontiersmen as a tried and fearless fighter and "boss" of valuable freight trains. During all his toiling across the plains from post to post he searches for his little friend May Bell, who disappeared in one of the earliest fights. After many years he finds her, and their joyous reunion on Colonel Maxwell's ranch makes up to Clint for all his long years of loneliness. The story ends happily, but not before they have both experienced many more desperate ordeals.

ROMANCE IN A TRAIN.

["Lady of the Night," by Sydney Horler; Hodder & Stoughton, 3/6 net.]

Though we have travelled frequently on the Paris-Marseilles express past Avignon, we have never been fortunate enough to find a most beautiful young woman dashing into our compartment, and requesting to send away a non-existent man outside in the corridor. Mr. Horler's hero in this recent book "Lady of the Night," had better luck and from the encounter all sorts of excitement—starting with a murder and ending with—but we must not anticipate, or spoil our readers' pleasure. Suffice it to say that from beginning to end, the story rushes from one exciting episode to another and that it is well-nigh impossible to put the book down, once begun, before the final page is reached.

Mr. Horler has been responsible for several excellent mystery stories, among which our readers will no doubt recall "The Secret Service Man," and "The Worst Man in the World."

A NEW EDITION.

Law of Negotiable Instruments.

Of the numerous popular works on business and legal subjects inaugurated by the celebrated legal writer of the last century, the late Mr. James Walter Smith, LL.D., one of the most useful has been "the law of bills, cheques notes & I.O.U.'s." First printed in 1859, it now reaches its seventeenth thousand in an edition revised by Mr. R. Borregard, M.A., barrister-at-law (Eppingham Wilson, Esq.). Even in these days of "best sellers," a record such as this is exceptional, and, furthermore, it is of interest to note that the old-established publishing house of Eppingham Wilson pursues its way unperturbed in keeping its standard libraries revised to meet current conditions of business practice and law, rather than throw on an already overstocked market a stream of new text books. "The law of bills, cheques, notes & I.O.U.'s" affords the commercial world a cheap and commendable exposition of the law of negotiable instruments. Recent legal decisions illustrating the position of innocent parties who give value for instruments fraudulently drawn are quoted and explained. For instance, forgery is now differently defined. The changes in stamp duties are also considered. Chiefly meant for the guidance of men and women in business, this book nevertheless is valuable to the student on account of its comparative brevity, the division of its chapters into numbered sections, reference headings, and a full index now added.

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION
[The text is partially obscured and difficult to read, but appears to be a list of names or titles.]

G. B. S. ON HIMSELF.

Peculiarities of An Irish Genius.

Like many another man of genius, G. Bernard Shaw has shown little inclination to ignore, either in his writings or in his frequent verbal encounters, the importance of publicity. But useful as such advertisement has been, it has its drawbacks. One is that the real G. Bernard Shaw is obscured by the publicity picture of a formidable critic, philosopher and dramatist who knows no human weakness, shows no quarter to his foes, and delights equally in skirmishes with his friends. But a legend, however flattering, eventually becomes rather irksome with time, more particularly when one is expected to live up to it. To dissipate, therefore, the more popular fallacies about himself, which have apparently found their way even into an academic series of lectures on "Bernard Shaw," the benign author of "St. Joan," has, it is reported, in a gloss on the syllabus of the lectures on himself forwarded to him by a friend of the lecturer, mildly reproved this popular tendency to make him out what he is not, and has submitted a few correctives to the accepted version of his own character.

Thus the world is now adjured to believe that, far from being a brazenly impudent public speaker and critic in his pre-dramatic period, G. Bernard Shaw was really a "horribly shy and diffident young man." The great ability, it appears, of which the young Irishman was then unconscious, asserted itself in this way through the disadvantages and the ignorance of which he was too conscious. And, one learns somewhat sadly, in those days he shared another all-too-common failing of aspiring youth in wishing to become something quite different from what he finally excelled in. For his real ambition, he confesses, was to become an opera singer or a painter, and—most human touch of all—he began writing because he could do nothing else!

The greatest surprise, however, G. B. S. leaves to the last. He always was, he asserts emphatically, extremely sensitive, and never enjoyed indulging in "hammerings." If, as sometimes indubitably happens, he does occasionally hit hard, it is because he likes his man to have a good contest, so that he may feel that he has been worthy of his opponent's steel. Otherwise, Mr. Shaw wishes it to be universally known, he has a horror of humiliating or discouraging people.

There is nothing in these assertions, it need hardly be said, that will surprise anyone who has had the opportunity of meeting the great Irishman in person.

POSTHUMOUS POEM.

Flower of "Ancient Mariner."

[In the Delineator is a posthumous poem of Carman's that carries a slight flavour of the "Ancient Mariner," and an echo of the meters of "Songs from Vagabonds."]

PASSING STRANGE.

[By Bliss Carman]
I walked upon the headland
With my friend one summer day
When an unknown foreign schooner
Came stealing up the bay.

Her sails were light as moonshine;
Her hull was dark as night,
And silence fell between us
For wonder at the sight.

No name upon her quarter,
No flag at peak nor fore,
To tell her port or errand—
No friendly look she wore.

All day she tacked before us
Or lay to on the tide,
As if awaiting orders
From one who should decide.

And never a ship's bell sounded,
Never a voice rang out,
As she heeled before the wind-flaws.

Or stood up to come about.
Why, it is passing strange," I said.
"Aye, passing strange," said he,
And I could see that in his face
I did not like to see.

She did not come to anchor
Nor greet the sailors far,
But when the harbour twilight
Fell, she was waiting there.

ANCIENT THEBES.

Splendour and Beauty of the Palaces.

The royal palaces, as we have seen, had nothing in their structure to compare with the houses of the gods. Their beauty was not that of imposing mass of superb materials, but of tasteful interior decoration and sumptuous furniture. The palace of the most gorgeous of all the Pharaohs, Amenhotep III, has been excavated twice within recent years. We are to imagine a low, rambling, wide-spreading brick building faced with white stucco, by no means imposing in outward appearance, and not for a moment to be compared with the pretentious splendours of an Assyrian palace, or with the vast labyrinth which the kings of the House of Minos were rearing in Crete. Sennacherib or Ashurbanipal would have thought himself poorly lodged in the mud-brick mansion which the wealthiest of earthly empires deemed sufficient for his needs. But within the walls, there was abundance of beauty and richness to make up for the lack of external impressiveness.

Soft Colour
The white walls glowed with soft colour, the Egyptian's passionate love for nature and the open air found expression on every side in fresco paintings, executed with the best skill of the time, of scenes from the life of woodland, marsh and river. On the ceilings birds fluttered across the blue sky, while the floors were gay with representations of pond and marsh.

Recent excavations in the Valley of the Kings have given us many actual specimens of the furniture which Pharaoh used in these beautiful rooms. We can see the arm-chairs in which Amenhotep may have sat when he came to visit Prince Iua and Princess Tulu, the father and mother of his much loved wife, Queen Ty, the cushions in which royal and princely jewels were kept, the gilded chariots in which Pharaoh or a great prince of the empire drove abroad through the city, the state collars which the great man wore, the walking sticks which he used when he took his walks abroad, the very gloves that he wore. Altogether Pharaoh's great house, if less pretentious than that of an Assyrian king, was proportionally more tasteful; and again one wonders if our modern civilization can show anything better in the way of housing a man amidst comfort and beauty than this ancient empire had attained three thousand five hundred years ago.

Barbaric Gaudiness.
The houses of the great nobles and officials repeated on a smaller scale the characteristics of that of their master. The Egyptian noble could be gorgeous enough on occasion; but he came of too old a stock to riot in tasteless and barbaric gaudiness, and his motto was simplex munditia. The great great city must have gained unusual beauty from the thoroughly Egyptian proclivity for bringing the beauty of the country into the midst of the town. Each mansion was surrounded by its pleasure garden, with trees, flower-beds and pergolas, and its sheet of ornamental water, dotted with water-lilies and other aquatic plants. Altogether, one imagines Thebes as the noblest city of the ancient world—James Baikie, F.R.S., in "The Glamour of Near East Excavation."

ECONOMIC UNITY OF EMPIRE

MR. BALDWIN AND COLONIAL SUGAR DUTIES

CONSERVATIVE IDEAL.

London, Yesterday.
Safeguarding and the economic unity of the Empire were proclaimed by Mr. Stanley Baldwin at a Primrose League gathering at the Albert Hall as the planks of the Conservative platform for the next election. The Party had never lost protection as its ideal.

Giving an instance of the attitude of the Government in regard to Colonial sugar, he said that Mr. Snowden's view that sugar and preferential duties might go was directly contrary to Conservative opinion. If the Dominions showed that they wanted something in return which was obtainable by the taxation of foreign foodstuffs, Conservatives, when next in office, would submit a treaty for a clear cut, popular referendum. He emphasized that the country would not be asked to vote upon food taxes at the next election. Mr. Baldwin declared that the Party was united on the policy stated at the Hotel Cecil on March 4.—Reuter.

[In a recent speech Mr. Baldwin said that he accepted the main purpose of the United Empire Party crusade of Lord Beaverbrook.]

BRITAIN & EGYPT.

Negotiations to Conclude Treaty.

Rugby, Yesterday.
The negotiations for the conclusion of the British and Egyptian treaty were continued at a meeting in the Foreign Office to-day. Various points were discussed in the light of observations furnished by the Egyptian delegation and good progress was made. A further meeting has been arranged for Monday.—British Wireless Service.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD.

Melbourne, Yesterday.
The Commonwealth Bank has arranged to ship overseas a further £3,000,000 in gold, making £24,500,000 shipped since July 1, last year.—Reuter.

EXPORT CREDITS.

Operation of Scheme to Be Extended.

RISK OF BAD DEBTS

Rugby, Yesterday.
A Bill is to be introduced by the Government to extend the operation of the export credits scheme until March, 1935. Under the existing legislation the scheme lapses on September of next year. The extension has been decided upon in order to remove uncertainty from the mind of exporters. This has been rendered the more necessary by the increasing number of exporters who are having the advantage of facilities provided for insuring against risk of bad debts abroad. Nearly 1,000 new connections have been made during the past year and since July, 1929, contracts concluded under the scheme amount to nearly $13,000,000. The new bill will not increase the maximum liability of the Government, which is £26,000,000.—British Wireless Service.

FATAL LAUGHTER.

Theatre Audience to Be Insured.

How great is the risk of any one dying of laughter?

This question has just been explored by the management of the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, which has taken the novel step of insuring against any member of the audience meeting with such a fate during the revival of "Dandy Dick" Sir Arthur Pinero's farce.

Recently a woman in the audience was taken ill and a doctor gave his opinion that a severe heart attack had been brought on through excessive laughter and excitement.

Determined to be forearmed against the repetition of such an occurrence with more serious results, the management has insured with a prominent firm, whose chairman has quoted the risk as a 10 per cent. one.

More than 435,000 pounds of postal matter were carried over the air mail routes in Canada last year.

RED MENACE IN CHINA

TROOPS HELPLESS

Canton, Yesterday.
Thousands of Communists under the leaders Chu Tak and Mo Chak-tung continued southward after occupying Namhung District. The magistrate of Namhung escaped to Canton to ask for reinforcements. The Communists, large in number occupied the Chi Hing Districts on April 3. The garrisons of the Namhung Chiung districts, being small in number, were unable to resist them and are retreating southward to Siukwan.

The three battalions under Commander Wu Man-hin and the regiment under Commander Tsang Yow-yan, fearing they would be unable to suppress such large numbers, are reported to have remained at Siukwan.

The Chamber of Commerce of the northern districts repeatedly wired the Canton Government, requesting reinforcements and stating that numerous refugees are fleeing southward from Namhung and Chihing. Chan Ming-shu despatched the eighth and ninth corps of gendarmes of Canton to Siukwan yesterday.

Chan Tsi-lang ordered Chan Hon-kwang lead his regiment, comprising three battalions of infantry and one corps each of machine guns and artillery, to reinforce Siukwan. Chan Hon-kwang's regiment reached Canton from Wuchow this morning. The Siukwan passenger trains were suspended to-day in order to transport the troops to Siukwan.—Wah Tat Yat Po.

EMPRESS PASSES.

Queen of Kings of Ethiopia.

REGENT OCCUPIES PALACE

Addis Ababa, Yesterday.
The death is announced of Zauditu "Empress of Abyssinia and Queen of the Kings of Ethiopia." The Regent, Ras Tafari, now occupies the Palace with his own troops, and up to the present the country is quiet.—Reuter.

[Little is known of her personal life. Brought up in the privacy of the palace, she at first maintained herself in complete retirement, emerging only for state purposes. But latterly she had shared in such social amenities as the Abyssinian capital has to offer. Her presence in the royal stand at the race meeting in 1920, in spite of her elaborate veiling, was an event whose significance none could fail to mark. Those who knew her described her as a simple and remarkably intelligent woman, who liked to be her natural self, but who could when necessary, think and act like the empress of the oldest empire in the world to-day.]
